

James Peach

James Peach is a multi-award-winning global marketing leader who has worked with brands including Uber, Vinted, innocent Drinks and Coca-Cola.

He has built and led high-performing teams across Europe and North America, helping scale some of the world's most recognisable consumer and tech brands.

James spent two years cycling 41,000km solo around the world, has hiked solo across three continents, and completed the first triathlon to span an entire nation.

Today, he helps organisations unlock growth, navigate uncertainty and build resilient, high-performance cultures.

As a keynote speaker, James is known for talks that are relatable, honest and energising - blending hard-won lessons from business, leadership and adventure.

Audiences leave not just inspired, but equipped with clear, practical strategies they can apply immediately.

James is also an ambassador for CALM, the Campaign Against Living Miserably, supporting its work around mental health and suicide prevention.

"James immediately understood the brief and, wow, did James deliver an engaging and inspiring keynote speech."

James brought to life resilience and teamwork with the most captivating and entrancing talk. He left the audience truly galvanised by his fascinating adventures, yet humbled by how relatable he is.

I've seen my fair share of speakers over the years and hands down James has been my favourite to date. A normal person who has done extraordinary things.

The true measure of the impact is that several months on the teams are still referring to what we learned on the day with James. I recommend James without hesitation for anyone looking for a keynote speaker."
