

Jon Kay

Jon Kay is a BBC Breakfast Presenter and a roving reporter for BBC News.

Jon relishes the sheer variety of stories he has to cover. "Some of the reporting has been tough – like the repatriations at Wootton Bassett and hardly a month goes by without me being battered by gale-force winds or smothered in snow - but I also get to meet some amazing people and report on some fantastic things – like the Glastonbury Festival and an octogenarian sky-diver."

Jon was the Olympics correspondent for BBC News at Six and Ten during the London 2012 Games. And he travelled across the Atlantic with a ship full of history buffs to commemorate the centenary of the Titanic tragedy.

He has done several stints abroad as a BBC foreign correspondent – including Los Angeles and Washington DC as well as working all over Europe.

Jon has presented all kinds of programmes for the BBC. He has anchored "Drive" on 5 live, documentaries for Radio 4, the BBC Two environmental series "It's Not Easy Being Green" and a documentary about bread-making for BBC Four.
