

‘Presenter, Host & After Dinner Speaker’

Quentin Wilson

Now best known for creating, producing and presenting Britain's Worst Driver, Quentin is a wonderfully distinctive television presenter, journalist and writer. As well as being an authority on all things motoring, he is an avowed champion of consumer awareness and customer service in every area of life.

With a degree in English, Quentin went on to work as a second-hand car dealer and soon became the proud owner of a large upmarket dealership. Whilst there, he started one of the first magazines devoted to the used car industry, Buying Cars - later renamed Car Choice. He then went on to make his name as a presenter on Top Gear, The Car's the Star and the property show All the Right Moves.

He is a regular contributor to The Times, The Daily Telegraph, FHM and Classic Car, and has written The Ultimate Classic Car Book.

Quentin is a skilled conference presenter and a highly engaging after dinner speaker. In his own characteristically dry way, he touches on houses and architecture, the media, modern art and the highs and lows of customer service - not forgetting his other true passion: political correctness.
